Understanding a New Normal: Thinking Through Process

Exhibit 2

Companies need to think and act across five horizons.

The five horizons

1 Resolve

Address the immediate challenges that COVID-19 represents to institution's workforce, customers, technology, and business partners

2 Resilience

Address near-term cash-management challenges and broader resiliency issues during virus-related shutdowns and economic knock-on effects

3 Return

Create detailed plan to return business to scale quickly as COVID-19 situation evolves and knock-on effects become clearer

4 Reimagination

Reimagine the next normal: what a discontinuous shift looks like and implications for how institutions should reinvent

5 Reform

Be clear about how regulatory and competitive environments in industry may shift

Need to Understand Local Human Psyche Impacting New Normal...

A majority is comfortable going to a grocery store now; larger majorities are uncomfortable going to stores or eating out

Q: Regardless of current restrictions in your area, would you feel comfortable or uncomfortable _____ at this time?

Note: "No opinion" not shown.

Most Americans doubt gatherings will be safe until at least summer

Q: When do you expect the coronavirus outbreak to be controlled enough that people can safely attend gatherings of 10 or more people? By the end of April, by the end of May, by the end of June, by the end of July, later in 2020 or will it take longer than that?

Need to Understand Trends Impacting New Normal

- On average it takes 66 days for people to form a new habit... Stay at home, social distancing, and virus worries have been present in our lives since roughly 2 months.
 - Shopping Shifts – E-Commerce, Delivery, Pick-up
 - Spending more times outdoors and recreating
 - Thinking of vacations differently
 - Rural vs. Urban
- 1/3 workforce working remotely
 - Rural Living
 - Office Space Needs
 - Technology Barriers
 - Changes to our Homes
 - Less Business Travel
- High unemployment – consumerism and tourism hits

Summary: Be Thoughtful in Recovery – No Time to Simply Follow – Be Strategic
